2. COMOR's business has not only been frequently extremely complicated but has also been demanding because of the urgent pressure to respond to requests from the United States Intelligence Board, the Chairman, or the individual members. The need for speed and the simultaneous need for patience as well as clarity of thought have been persistent. I am pleased to say that [REDACTED] has responded to these demands in a dependable and constructive way. In my estimation his initiative and ability in drafting and redrafting has been a major factor in ensuring CIA leadership in COMOR.
